World Communion Sunday

This Sunday will be World Communion Sunday. It is always the first Sunday in October, and it is a realization that whether you celebrate the Lord's Supper periodically or weekly, it is something that you do not only with your congregation and with your Lord, but also in communion with the whole world. Many congregations and denominations have observed this practice for decades. This Sunday as we gather, we remember that we are connected - even united - with billions of other across the globe through recognizing Christ's invitation and welcome to each of us.

As children of God, we belong to a large global family. We often point out differences and even conflicts, but honestly, there is much more that should unite us than those aspects that we use to draw boundaries. Boundaries are only imaginary lines anyway. I mentioned before my prayers for harmony and even unity. These prayers continue.

I hope that whether you are gathered in the sanctuary or worshipping from home this Sunday that you feel the presence of our Eastminster family and that you feel the kinship of God's great family of people throughout the earth. Jesus welcomes you to the table, and into his diverse company of followers.

Blessings,
J.T.
